1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image processing apparatus, such as a digital copying machine, and more particularly to a technique for improving image quality of a color original read and outputted by a reflection reading method.

2. Description of the Related Art FIG. 1 is a schematic view showing a configuration of a conventional copying machine. The copying machine comprises: a scanner unit 1 for optically scanning a color original, such as a color document, upon scanning light of reflected light, from the color original; a fixing unit 2 for fixing a color toner image formed on a photosensitive member by an electrophotographic process, onto a paper sheet, based on the scanned image; and a feeding unit 3, to which the paper sheets bearing color images fixed in the fixing unit 2, are fed. This copying machine can be of a monochrome copying machine if the scanner unit 1 is provided. In this case, a document as a copying object is scanned by a transmission reading method using an optical transmission system, and a corresponding image is transferred onto a photosensitive member by a transfer method using a charging method, a developing method, and the like, and then, fixed onto the paper sheet. On the other hand, in the case of a color copying machine, an
